Teaching Associate: University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA (1993-2006)

- Honors 191D, 291D, 391D-The Dean's Book Course: Commonwealth Honors College, University of Massachusetts Amherst (2003-2006). Students read and responded to a book chosen by the Honor students. All Commonwealth College students took three sections of the Dean's Book course, for a total of 3 credits. Students concentrated on research, analytical writing, oral presentation skills, and discussion of controversial material as it pertained to the chosen book.
- Management Communication: Isenberg School of Management, University of Massachusetts (1998-1999). This course satisfies the junior year writing requirement for business majors.
- Writing and Reading Imaginative Literature: The UMass Amherst MFA Program for Poets and Writers, University of Massachusetts Amherst (1997). An upper-level course designed to gain an understanding of creative literature by reading modern and contemporary writers, and by writing and revising poetry and fiction.
- College Writing: The Writing Program, University of Massachusetts Amherst (1993-1998). This course satisfies the university writing requirement and emphasizes student writing as the primary text. It encourages students to become more reflective of the writing process: prewriting, revising, editing.
- Writing Tutor for the Disabled: University of Massachusetts (1997). Responsibilities included providing individual attention for blind students requiring help in composition.
- Writing Program Tutor: University of Massachusetts (1993-1996). Responsibilities included providing individual attention for those needing additional help in writing college essays and dissertations.

Writing Program Curriculum Coordinator, Belchertown High School, Belchertown, MA (2000-2003)

- Designed the curriculum for BHS' Freshmen Writing Program
- Focused on international writers, writing strategies, and essay writing inspired by the arts

High School English Teacher, Belchertown High School, English Department, Belchertown, MA (2000-2003)

- Writing for Success: This writing course focused on academic writing inspired by the arts: visual art, music, dance, and poetry. Compositions included persuasive, documented, descriptive, historical, analytical, and observational essays.
- Literary Forms Explorations 9: This literature course explores the novel, the short story, the poem, the myth, and drama. In writing, emphasis is placed on methods of inventing, selecting, organizing, and developing ideas, along with techniques of revising and editing.

- Literary Forms Discovery 10: The composition program at this level concentrates on literary analysis, expository prose, and the essay. The approach to literature represents a broad historical and cultural spectrum. Genres include poetry, drama, novel, myth, and short story.
- Literary Forms Communications 10 (Special Education): This course serves to strengthen the student's understanding and use of language, both written and verbal communication. Readings include the novel, drama, poetry, and short story from both classical and contemporary literature. Verbal and visual teaching, such as poetry recitation and analysis of fine art, inspires student learning.
- Honors Literary Concepts 10: This course provides the student with an in-depth and accelerated study of literature. Students expand their appreciation for the basic literary forms as they become more sophisticated in approaches to their reading and writing.
